Peace prospects over in Mexico are about as certain as statehood.—New Mexico Homeland.

Last week while Vicksburg, Mississippi, was having the first snow storm of its history, the Estancia Valley prairies were greener than first love.—New Mexican Homeland.

No immunity bath for bribers in darkest Ohio—and next thing you know there won't be enough citizens left with the franchise to elect a constable.—Albuquerque Journal.

Where'll they get a citizen to run for the office of constable?

A word of warning for our farmers is in order, that they watch the cattle and not let them eat the thistle or tumbleweed while the frost is on it. Apparently this plant is like the red clover in that while ordinarily it is as good feed for cattle as there is to be had, yet if eaten with frost or dew on it, it proves a deadly poison—the cattle bloating terribly and unless relieved by sticking, die in great pain. A little care may save a valuable animal.
